ANTLERED HERD OFF CURTAIN FALLS ON KOOYMAN COMEDY

Two Trains of Elks Depart Judge Gowans Gives Twain Chance to Show Fitness as Parents.

> LAST ACT OF LITTLE PLAY HAS ITS SENSATIONS

Plans to Receive Visitors at San Mrs. Nellie Eggan Tells of Family Head's Amorous Conduct.

> Hugging a wan little baby to her bosom and sobbing as though her heart would break, the wife of John Kooyman declared to Judge Gowans in the juvenile court, Saturday morning, that she was virtually a stranger in a strange land and that her neighbors and others had been unfair to the Kooyman family. Mrs. Koovman talked in a mixture of Dutch and English, and it was difficult to understand her. She had gotten the idea, however, that her baby was to be taken from her and she was bordering upon hysterics.

Mrs. Kooyman's statements came at the close of a sensational hearing as to the morals and general deportment of her husband, touching his fitness to retain possession of three of his fourteen children, who have been declared delinquent by the court.

Mrs. Nellie T. Eggan, a sister of the divorced wife of Kooyman's son, was the only witness against Kooyman, Satturday, but, if her testimony is true, which is denied by Kooyman, it was which is denied by Kooyman, it was what is generally termed "a plenty."

Mrs. Eggan told the court that Kooyman had been the bane of her existence for more than three years. By way of specifications, she said that Kooyman had always begged her to marry him and that upon one occasion, three years ago, he assaulted her. She also said that Kooyman's attentions to her caused the separation of herself and husband. She declared that Kooyman's reputation was bad and that she was "scared" of him.

Attorneys Exchange Words.

Attorneys Exchange Words.

James F. Smith, attorney for Kooyman, objected to the testimony. "The county attorney," he declared, "should be ashamed to drag this woman in here

Assistant County Attorney Carlson said that he was not ashamed of anything he was doing and added that the woman was not on trial. "Well, you ought to be asbamed," retorted Mr. Smith.

Continuing her testimony, Mrs. Eggan said that Kooyman took her to his home on November 5, 1907, and urged here to be his plural wife.

"His wife asked me what to do about it," the witness then said, "and I told her not to allow it. I gave her good advice, though she gives me the worst of it. As for Kooyman, he is a bad man and a sneaky man. His own wife will not trust him out with his own girls. Sometimes he wants his children to repent all at once and will wash his hands of that he would leave his wife and marry The children are out late every night, and Kooyman and his wife quar-rel all the time. I have seen his wife throw the coffee pot at him and he would run as fast as he could.

Kooyman Explains.

"On November 7, 1907, he told his wife that he wanted me for his plural wife and that he would live with us week about. His wife consented, but church official told him it would not He also wanted me to go to Mexico and marry him.

Another interesting statement by Mrs. Eggan was that she went to San Francisco and that Kooyman followed her. This was denied by Kooyman, who said: "Why, she paid my fare, didn't have a cent, but I had a remendation for work there. begged me to marry her and then had me rested twice. She got the money rested twice. She got the money to ance on her house, which had burned burning the house in question, but he was not prosecuted, for the reason that Mrs. Eggan declined to appear against Judge Gowans had a heart-to-heart talk with Kooyman regarding the proper with Kooyman regarding the proper care of the children and Kooyman inisted that he would do what was right. vented him from exercising proper anthority over his numerous offspring and suggested that the court call Mrs. Kooyman in and tell her that Kooyman was the head of the family and the one to control the children.

After a conference with Mrs. Kooyman, Judge Gowans said be would allow the three delinquent children to remain in the custody of their parents a sufficient time to demonstrate whether or not the parents could and would properly care for them.

The outside world, in spite of the studied censorship, which has defeated its own object, should not imagine that the throne of Portugal is tottering to ward revolution and that a republic is imminent. The general situation is grave rather than alarming. Political con-ditions, already chaotic before the murder of the king and crown prince, came utterly demoralized after the came utterly demoralized after the commission of these crimes. Then con-sternation and panic prevailed among the police and at court, and the release of Franco's strong band from the helm left the ship of state advirt. But with the new cabinet, pledged to constitu-tional methods and the abolition of the distatorship and existing measures of repression, the situation improved. King Manuel openly acknowledged the irregularity of the money advances to the royal family under his father's reign, which were the original causes of the political turmoil, and he publicly ordered the discontinuance of this prac-

Future Very Uncertain.

It is hard to forceast the future. If things drift back to the old rut of governmental corruption whence King Carlos and Premier Franco research the monarchy, a republic might come. The republicans are the natural inheritors of the mistakes of the monarchy, but the masses are grouning under their personal burdens. They are either ig-norant of or indifferent to the political turmail. Something is necessary to galvanize them into action, and this actly what the small but evidently des-perate organization of militant revolu-tionists in Lisbon and Operto are trying They want to drive the people to revolt
